Over 1200 Farm Men And Women Attend Farm Home Convention; "Meeting A Success," Dean Says

Attendance Above Last Year Despite Sleet And Snow

By DOROTHY ANGLE

Dean Thomas P. Cooper of the Agriculture and Home Economics college, and Director of Agricultural Extension and the Experiment station, stated on the closing day of the Farm and Home convention that the meeting had been "a very great success as attested by the presence of over 1,200 farm men and women."

"Undoubtedly the ice and snow kept a number away," he continued. He said that the officials estimated this year's group to be about 60 per cent of former years' attendance.

"This meeting, statewide in character, brings to farm women and men the latest thought on problems and questions that confront rural homes and the various situations that confront agriculture. The program this year high-lighted the influence of war and the responsibility of those in the home and on the farm," Dean Cooper said.

He said that nationally known speakers who appeared on every program brought information attendance to others in the county which will be relayed by those in who could not come to the meeting. At this meeting, the Homemakers club holds its annual business meeting to elect officers and make plans for the coming year, and similarly many breed associations held meetings.

Dean Cooper said that the aim of the Agriculture and Home Economics college is "to bring the broad information that will help these organizations in their work." He added that he had heard much comment this year in praise of the meeting.

As Director of Agricultural Extension, Dean Cooper spends much time in Washington and is playing a vital part in the agricultural program of the nation as well as of the state.

May, West Attend Annual Convention

J. W. May, associate professor of heating and ventilating engineering, and Perry West, head of the department of mechanical engineering, attended the 47th annual convention of the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers held in Cincinnati last week. Life membership in the society was conferred upon Professor West at this meeting.

WPB To Collect Used Hosiery

University women will have an opportunity to contribute to the War Production Board's collection of hosiery, according to an announcement by Mrs. Sarah B. Holmes, dean of women. Boxes for old stockings will be placed in each hall and annex by Miss Elizabeth Taylor, assistant residence hall dietitian, and the houses will be under the supervision of Miss Rosalie Oakes, YWCA secretary.

The hose, which must be previously washed, will be gathered from these campus collection points and sent to the Salvation Branch, Conservation Division, of the WPB. Hose in all combinations of silk, nylon, rayon, and cotton are requested in the drive. Used for the manufacture of powder bags for shells, these otherwise useless articles are urgently needed in war production today.

Question: What do you think of the blanks now being distributed among the women students asking for voluntary pledging to help in the war effort?

Elizabeth Shaker, Greensburg, Ky.: It sounds like a good thing. All students should be interested.

Maxine Rogers, Liberty, Ky.: Now the girls will have a chance to do what they're always talking about.

Betty Harris Russell, St. Louis, Mo.: I don't think it's asking too much of any of us.

Lillian Beaman, Monticello, Ky.: Count me in on doing my part, but why not have special courses giving an hour's credit?

But Kirkland, Orangeburg, S. C.: College students don't have time for special courses, but we'll do other things.

Betty Waltman, Lexington: It'll give the college girls an idea of what's going on in England and what should be going on here.

Penny Shively, Greensburg, Ky.: A swell thing—the least any of us can do.

Alice Freeman, Lexington, Ky.: It would be all right for those students carrying a light schedule.

Lacy Thomas, Paris: The dances and week-end socials are all right but leave the knitting to grandma.

Survey Shows Coeds Like To Play Poker

A survey among 520 college students, male and female, from five universities, reveals the interesting fact that the girls rather like to play poker. In fact, they also like to watch horse races and get all riled over political problems, just as the men do.

Dr. Clifford R. Adams, assistant professor of psychology at Pennsylvania State college, found out these things through his personal audit test.

Men, he said, aren't so much different from girls. They both like to act in movies, perform on the radio, and play golf and bridge.

But there are differences. Men like to be big shots. Deep down inside, the girls are still just as the men like to picture them. Social activities and charitable work are their forte. The coeds said they enjoyed entertaining and going to picnics, masquerade parties, and full-dress affairs.

SWEATER SWING ORCHESTRAS OUT FOR DURATION

"Host And Hostess" Plan To Be Carried Out Again Today

Due to the difficulty encountered in engaging orchestras for the sweater swings, the Union House committee has decided to furnish recorded music for the sweater sessions for the duration.

This policy was adopted as a result of financial difficulties and drift-riddled orchestras. As the first step toward the success of the new plan, a number of new records have been bought by the Union Board; and others will be purchased periodically. The committee in charge of selecting these records consists of Emily Hunt, Marie Brackett, and Charlie Gardner.

The "host and hostess" idea will be carried out again in today's sweater session to be held in the ballroom of the Union Building from 4 until 5:30 p. m. Hostesses and hosts for the sweater swing this afternoon are Marie Brackett, head hostess; Jeannette Graves, Marlan Yates, Maryanne Vogt, Bob Hillenmeyer, John Doddridge, Roy Hunt, and Jim Crowley.

FARMERS TOLD OUTPUT BOOST IS POSSIBLE

UK Teacher Cites Better Management As Solution

Kentucky farmers' will be able to meet all increases in their farm production goals this year, if they use better management and more machinery, Dr. Roy E. Proctor, field agent in farm management, has announced.

Dr. Proctor said Kentucky farmers this winter are doing "much solid thinking" and making plans carefully for their crops and livestock production in order to make the best use of feeds and labor.

He stressed the necessity for better use of farm machinery. In many neighborhoods, he added, there is a sufficient supply of equipment if it is fully used.

The field agent said that it may be necessary for many farmers to rent machinery or hire its owners to use it to seed, cultivate, or harvest crops. In other cases, he said, equipment will be exchanged or labor traded for machinery.

He predicted that many farmers will use more horses and mules this season, in order to use larger machinery, and that practical short-cutting devices put into operation.

Dr. Proctor suggested that farmers able to raise more livestock should obtain it from nearby farms, where their neighbors may have more stock than they can care for adequately this year.

CIVILIAN DEFENSE QUESTIONNAIRES TO BE TABULATED

Students To Check Jobs In Which They Can Assist

The war effort and civilian defense questionnaires which were distributed to all University women students last Thursday and Friday by the War Effort committee of the Union Board will be tabulated this week in order that work can begin as soon as possible.

Students were asked to check the jobs in which they could assist in some way and then return the questionnaires immediately to either the office of the dean of women or to the Union Information desk. As there is a great need for more people in civilian war work, the questionnaires list opportunities available to women students in campus as well as community activities.

Examples of the various jobs the women can choose from are surgical dressing, entertainment for soldiers, knitting, war stamp and bond selling, nurses' aide course, canteen course, home nursing, first aid course, and keeping records of in-

McElroy Selected To Serve On Union Commons Group

SGA Officially Accepts Report Of Investigation

Sam McElroy, agriculture editor from Morgantown, was appointed as the student member of the Union Commons committee at a meeting of the legislature of the Student Government association Thursday night.

McElroy will serve with Mrs. Sarah B. Holmes, dean of women, and Dr. Statle Erickson, head of the home economics department in advising Comptroller Frank D. Peterson on matters pertaining to the cafeteria.

The appointment was made after the SGA had voted to accept of the legislature of the Commons submitted by David Marcus, chairman of the Welfare committee. The report had been presented at an earlier meeting but action had been delayed because a quorum of members was not present at that time.

Discussion of proposed changes to be made in the new SGA constitution now being drafted by a special committee formed the major portion of business conducted at Thursday night's meeting.

Kenneth Vandlandingham, graduate representative, John Yeager, law representative, and Alex Hall, commerce representative, were appointed to draw up a tentative plan

Speaker Is Active In United China Relief Efforts

Liu Liang-Mo, noted Chinese social worker and authority on United Chinese relief, will be the featured member of the panel discussion of the Union-sponsored forum at 4 p. m. Wednesday, in the Music room of the Union building. The topic for discussion will be "Internal Problems of China."

Dr. Henry Noble Sherwood, assistant to the editor at the Experiment Station, will preside as chairman. Other members will be Dr. Alexander Capurso, executive director of the music department, and Ruth McQuown, political science graduate student.

Mr. Liu will be guest speaker at Pitkin club at noon Wednesday at Maxwell Street Presbyterian Church.

An informal dinner has been arranged in honor of Mr. Liu at 6 p. m. Wednesday in the Union building. Both faculty and students are invited to attend. Anyone planning to attend is requested to make reservations in the YWCA office.

Mr. Liu is active in United China relief and is probably best known for his efforts in organizing in 1935 the group singing movement throughout China, which has helped to solidify and keep up the morale of the Chinese people in their fight against Japanese aggression.

He was graduated from Shanghai University in 1934 and immediately entered the field of social work. In 1937 he was appointed by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek to initiate mass singing into the Chinese army. He worked with the army with much success until 1940 when he came to the United States to do graduate work at the University of Pennsylvania. In 1941, he became a member of the Chinese Participation Department of United China relief, and in September of that year was made an official lecturer for the relief movement.

Liu Liang-Mo speaks with authority on a variety of subjects. He is a keen analyst of the general Far Eastern situation of today from a political as well as military standpoint. He describes the growth of the Chinese cooperative movement. He knows intimately the progress of Christianity in China and at first hand the situation of the Chinese farmer, industrial worker, and laborer. He tells in detail of the exciting "mass singing movement" which he led and can describe thoroughly the building of the Burma road; the migration of entire Chinese university student bodies, facilities and equipment to the interior.

He will give personal interviews from 2 to 3:30 p. m. in the Y lounge of the Union building.

degradates in the armed forces. Although some of the blanks were distributed later than others, it is hoped that all women will return their blanks indicating that they will serve in some activity.

Jobs After War Is Problem

What seems to be bothering the senior women more than anything else is not so much getting jobs they want when they graduate as being sure that they will have jobs when the war is over.

The question that was repeated to Miss Alice Lloyd, dean of women at the University of Michigan, was "Will this particular job hold up after the war, and will I be discharged so that a returning serviceman may have a job?"

Another question was, "If I join the WAVES, WAACS, or SPARS, and am released six months after the war, how will my present training help me to get a job then?"

Miss Lloyd told the women that it was necessary for them to realize that there would be a great decrease in industry after the close of the war, and that it is much better to face that fact now, than to wait until after the war to plan what to do in that case. If they realize that they will be jobless after they are released from the services, they can be planning some method of making a living even while they are serving in the forces.

What appealed to us most about Miss Lloyd was her good old every-day common sense. She did not go off on a tangent of theorizing, but gave hard facts with which to back her statements.

If she thought there was no held open, for a certain type of training, she did not hesitate to say so, although it meant that the student felt that he had wasted several years' work. Usually there was some held where the work would be acceptable, but often this occupation was one that the student did not wish to consider.

Teaching seemed to be in the doghouse as far as a lot of the women were concerned, even those who were graduating in education or were at least prepared to teach. One woman felt that she could never teach because of the pupils that would dislike her. Miss Lloyd's answer to that was that if she were a good teacher, it would be only the minority who disliked her, and it is the majority that counts.

The women that had personal interviews with the dean seemed to get a great deal from talking with her. She listened to their problems and gave clear, concise answers.

At the dinner Friday night, she spoke more to the faculty members, and answered questions that they asked concerning how they could help the students adjust themselves to the war, and the problems that will arise after the peace.

One of the main pieces of work that will have to be carried on after the war is the rehabilitation program in the countries that have starved, frozen, and suffered the shocks of blitzes and of actual combat. This will be a problem that will have to be dealt with by the women of the United States, more than by those of any other country.

It will be their job to aid in making the peoples of the world physically fit and mentally able to cope with the post-war world. Any student who is interested in social service, physical therapy, occupational therapy, and like subjects, will be able to have a job for the asking, especially if she is able to speak one of the foreign languages.

Approximately 90 senior women signed for interviews, but many of them did not arrive. All we can say is that we think they missed something worth while, for we listened in on most of the interviews, and enjoyed every minute of them.

On thanks to Miss Lloyd for taking part of her very valuable time to come to help us.

A Word To The Wise Is Sufficient

Work weeks—we still can't get used to calling them that—may come and work weeks may go, but there is still a pattern that is rigidly adhered to.

By this we mean the "road trips" made, no doubt, for the morale of the initiate-to-be. Not that a little walking wouldn't be good for the soul, but sometimes the walkers are going to get in trouble.

We heard a story the other morning in which several pledges were in a bit of danger. It seems that last fall, a couple in a farmhouse heard some people prowling around the house, and were naturally a little ill at ease, for fear of thieves. The wife, looking out the window, saw someone looking in. When he was asked who he was, he made a bright answer, and almost got shot for his pains.

If the farmer had shot first, and asked questions afterward, there might have been some rather sick pledges. Within the last week or two, the same farmer was awakened by some more boys, who wanted to call someone to come after them. He could not be sure that they weren't just trying to find a plausible excuse to get into the house.

Not every one is like that, but there is danger in prowling around farm houses in the middle of the night, for most farmers keep a shotgun handy to ward off thieves, and are not afraid of shooting at the prowler, and then asking him what he wants.

If the city boys will stop a moment and remember that the farmer keeps on the farm his winter supply of meat, which is a temptation to thieves; his tobacco, from September until mid-winter; chickens; and sometimes wool, they will see that he has a right to be nervous.

If you just have to go up to the farmhouse to ask shelter or directions, be sure that you don't go prowling around the house, the barn, or the chicken roost before knocking on the front door.

Qualifications Stated

The War department set forth the qualifications by which it will nominate thousands of selectees for specialized training in basic and advanced subjects within college walls under the Joint Army-Navy plan.

Applicants for the basic training must measure up to these requirements:

1. Score 110 or better in an Army Classification Test.
2. Be high school graduate between the age of 18 and 21 inclusive (not attained 22nd birthday).
3. Complete the regular basic Army training or be in the process of completion.

To qualify for advanced training under the plan the applicant must meet these qualifications:

1. Pass the Classification Test with the same score.
2. Have one year of college work or its equivalent and be at least 18 but not necessarily under 22.
3. Complete or be completing the Army basic training.

The War department's statement pointed out that the trainees will be in uniform on active duty, will be paid while they learn and will be subject to military discipline. The colleges to which they are assigned will provide the instruction prescribed by the Army and will furnish housing and feeding facilities. The students will receive military training but it will be secondary to their academic work.

"The principal objective of the Army's Specialized Training Program," the statement declared, "is to meet the need of the army for technically trained soldiers for certain Army tasks for which its own training facilities are insufficient in extent or character."

From now on, Jimmy Henderson and Laura Jeanne Blake will advocate that people who live in glass houses should never throw snow balls. It seems that they broke their own Alpha Xi window while throwing at Bobby Meyers who was inside, calmly talking to Mrs. Hughes, the house mother.

Colonel Dewey is probably well satisfied to have David Trapp and Dickie Anspiger as staunch infantry men. Last Thursday night they demonstrated their future ability with hand grenades by displaying amazing accuracy in a snowball fight on his front porch. . . . The Colonel's daughters, Betty, Margaret, and Barbara formed the enemy opposition.

Upon returning home last Wednesday night, I found the Sigma Chi house looked as if it had had the measles. . . . there were literally a blue million white spots all over it. I later found out that the attacking force was moving over Kappa Alpha with its snowball artillery guns. A couple coke bottles sailing through the air, at the Sig house turned them blue with rage.

Then there is little Betty "girl of a few thousand words" June Pugh who swears up and down the Kernel news room that the dentist pulled the wrong wisdom tooth.

McElroy Appointed
As predicted last week, big "Colonel" Collier strengthened his forces by appointing Sam McElroy to the cafeteria advisory committee. Many wondered why David Marcus didn't receive the position. Perhaps the truth about David's secret mission will soon be published.

It's not for me to say, but I do believe some of the student government representatives should attend a meeting once in a great while. Even big Jim says some of them should take an interest or take a powder.

The One That Got Away

The Whirlwind

By Ed Barnes

She was only a snowman's daughter, but she was too hot for Miss Lester. The girls over at the dorm decided that building snowmen was a thing of the past, so they built a snow-woman. . . . good for a whistle any day, so much so that Miss Lester made the girls tear down their creation.

New Members
Many organizations on the campus are faced with a problem somewhat different from any other in previous years. Take Lamp and Cross for instance; if they don't take in new members from the junior class, they won't have any one to carry on the colors when the war is over. Normally, the senior honorary would initiate their new members at the beginning of next quarter, but by that time all of the juniors, who would be considered candidates, will be deep in the mud of Benning.

To complicate the picture, Jim Crowley ("Big Richard") of Lamp and Cross says his hands are tied until he hears from Lances, the junior honorary. "They," barked big Jim, "cannot accept a bid to Lamp and Cross until the new sophomores are full fledged Lances members." The problem will undoubtedly be acted upon in the very near future.

As predicted last week, big "Colonel" Collier strengthened his forces by appointing Sam McElroy to the cafeteria advisory committee. Many wondered why David Marcus didn't receive the position. Perhaps the truth about David's secret mission will soon be published.

It's not for me to say, but I do believe some of the student government representatives should attend a meeting once in a great while. Even big Jim says some of them should take an interest or take a powder.

From now on, Jimmy Henderson and Laura Jeanne Blake will advocate that people who live in glass houses should never throw snow balls. It seems that they broke their own Alpha Xi window while throwing at Bobby Meyers who was inside, calmly talking to Mrs. Hughes, the house mother.

Colonel Dewey is probably well satisfied to have David Trapp and Dickie Anspiger as staunch infantry men. Last Thursday night they demonstrated their future ability with hand grenades by displaying amazing accuracy in a snowball fight on his front porch. . . . The Colonel's daughters, Betty, Margaret, and Barbara formed the enemy opposition.

Upon returning home last Wednesday night, I found the Sigma Chi house looked as if it had had the measles. . . . there were literally a blue million white spots all over it. I later found out that the attacking force was moving over Kappa Alpha with its snowball artillery guns. A couple coke bottles sailing through the air, at the Sig house turned them blue with rage.

Then there is little Betty "girl of a few thousand words" June Pugh who swears up and down the Kernel news room that the dentist pulled the wrong wisdom tooth.

The German Mind And Nazism

By Dr. Harold A. Basilius

Dr. Basilius, who is associate professor of German at Wayne University, taught German at Ohio State and the University of Chicago before going to Wayne. He moved to Wayne during the summer of 1936. The following article is reprinted from the Detroit Collegian of Wayne University.

The term "German Mind" does not mean an absolute of one kind or another. The understanding and discussion of such absolutes is the special province of theologians, assorted contemporary politicians and some history professors, many of whom display a trusting acceptance of "the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." I am totally unaware of the existence of such absolutes and I shall, therefore, understand the "German Mind" to mean the beliefs, opinions, hopes and aspirations common to a majority of contemporary Germans, as far as I was able to determine them, up to 1936 when I was last in Germany.

To begin, I find the Germans not unlike most Frenchmen, Spaniards, Englishmen, Italians or Americans, in short no different from most western Europeans and Americans. I hesitate to extend the comparison to include eastern Europeans, viz. the Russians, or Asians such as the Japs, Chinese or Indians because about those people I know only what I have read. I am by nature and training inclined to be suspicious about most things, particularly generalizations, which I hear or read and cannot verify by experience.

Most Germans aspire to live their lives in normal fashion. They want a job, a wife or husband, children, a home and with these things some social and economic security. They dislike war because they know it to be totally negative and destructive and because they have learned by the hard way that it is never the politicians but always the people who must pay for a war.

Though the majority of Germans together with all other men of good will desire peace, there hovered over all Europeans, beginning early in the thirties, the ominous feeling that another major war was inevitable. World machinery was not functioning properly. The people were unable through no fault of their own to have the things that for most people mean happiness and contentment.

The tendency was, and quite rightly so, to

Participation In Religious Affairs

Last Tuesday the YWCA and the YMCA began distributing questionnaires among students to find out the amount of participation in religious affairs during the present war crisis.

The blanks were given out by representatives in the various dormitories and sorority houses. This survey will ascertain what plans can be made for further religious participation on the campus. It is for you as students.

The Y groups are your organizations. They are designed to help you in every way possible. Its student leaders are those who attend regularly and work steadily at their task.

We hope you filled out your questionnaire carefully and conscientiously. Think about it a lot. In the end, you know, it will benefit you.

The first issue of the Campus News has been sent to former U.K. men now in the armed forces. They number about 1,000.

The news sheet is composed of news items and feature stories from regular editions of The Kernel.

With the appearance of this sheet in almost every post here and abroad, the University has taken a definite step toward closer contact with place most of the blame on the settlement following the last war, that is the Versailles treaty of 1919. Most of Europe acknowledged the truth of this, but the politicians, the statesmen, if you must, were impotent as they usually are when faced with constructive tasks.

In Germany, this point of view became the fetish of a political party particularly after the devastating inflation of the early twenties which all but annihilated the middle class. This party we now know as the Nazi party which in the late twenties began the series of spectacular political maneuvers which culminated in its ascent to supreme political control in 1933 under Hitler.

My point, then, is that the Germans, who are little different from other Europeans, were duped by their politicians into a position which culminated in the present war. Most non-Germans do not quarrel with their objective, namely the correction of the impossible economic and social conditions of the 1919 treaty. We must, however, disapprove violently of the method which in a clever propaganda combined the just criticism of Versailles and various constructive social measures with a refurbished Aryan myth and the will to power. The present mess in which we find ourselves is then the net result of the work of stupid Allied politicians in 1919 and of subsequent stupid and vicious German politicians in our day. By no stretch of the imagination is it attributable to the "German Mind."

The will to power suggests its author Friedrich Nietzsche and with him Schopenhauer, Hegel, Wagner and various other German thinkers and artists from whose names the Myth of the German Mind is usually composed forth. I allude to such recent books as Viereck's Myth and Nietzsche's Egoism in German Philosophy.

Both of these books and a host of their imitators imply the existence of such a thing as the "German Mind" and have succeeded rather well in disseminating the idea. As I have said, however, such notions are the business of theologians and politicians and have little relation to reality. They are as baseless and absurd as the ascription of violence to the Non-Aryan Mind by German politicians.

The work of Miss Margie and Dr. Plummer is to be commended. It probably wasn't a too easy job to pick out news of the greatest interest to these men.

The Christmas letters which were sent out by University women to former students now in the service turned out to be quite a success, too.

Most of the girls had answers from at least two of the letters they addressed and mailed. The boys seemed to appreciate the fact that the Alma Mater hadn't forgotten them after all.

Wasn't it strange that we were getting an inside look as to what Casablanca life is, President Roosevelt and Winston Churchill were right there mapping out future plans toward Allied victory?

Well, even though it was just a movie at the "Kennedy," I felt rather peculiar when I bought a Herald-Leader extra at the hall of the K.V. Vandy game last Tuesday night. Felt like I at least knew where the place was and that it was about time Americans stepped in over there.

Punjab Regiment Shows Up Well

In its first engagement of the kind, a battalion of a Punjab Regiment has put up a fine performance against Panzer troops, writes an Indian Army Observer.

This battalion had already been under fire at Tmmi, in the Western Desert, where it fought a rearguard action in the withdrawal to Gazala; but that, as one of the men said, was a "tamasha" compared with their recent experiences on Ruweisat Ridge.

Artillery and Stukas plastered every yard of the positions they held, tanks pounded at them, but the Punjab Regiment stood firm and held their ground.

After General Auchinleck's withdrawal to the Alamein positions he gradually gathered strength and reorganized his forces. Finally he felt strong enough to take the initiative and probe the enemy's defenses for weak points.

The Punjab battalion was chosen as the spearhead of the operations on the Ruweisat Ridge. Early on July 21 they marched six miles to their forming-up place. They were enthusiastic and in high spirits at the thought of attacking the enemy after all this withdrawal.

Zero hour was 8.30 p.m. that day when the artillery put up a heavy barrage. The battalion advanced and continued steadily in spite of heavy defensive fire by the Germans.

As the men approached their objective, anti-tank guns and machine guns opened fire to stem their advance. Finally, fire became so intense that the men could not move a yard without being hit. They were then within 400 yards of their objective.

Here they stopped. It was too dark except for the flashes of guns and trail of tracers. In their advance they had encountered enemy outposts and had cleared them efficiently, taking more than a hundred prisoners.

The situation was somewhat confused, as may be judged from the experience of one of the men. As fire intensified, he jumped into a slit trench which was already occupied, and told the occupant to make room. The man either did not understand or paid no heed. The Punjab angrily shouted at him to move to one side. The next moment he heard something like "Hindian!" from his neighbor, who thereupon jumped out and ran. He was a German and fell to his own comrades' bullets.

Next day the objective was taken, but the battalion remained under constant shell fire. Stuka dive-bombers did their worst, yet they stood firm. The men, as one of the officers said, were exceptionally cool and steady under very heavy fire.

Every man in the battalion showed up well in this action. The signallers had a particularly hard job, but they did it very pluckily, especially Naik Hazara Singh. To Co-ed Corner . . .

By SCOTTY McCULLOCH

After much sliding and slipping we finally got to the grill before the last bell rang for the fourth hour and managed to get to the lecture. Looking over what we had jotted down in the Grillology notebook, we find Mary Saunders KD running around in search of a coke, and really looking good in a gray blue sweater with a harmonizing red, white and blue skirt in a hounds tooth check. Alpha Gam Lucy Byrn looking very smart and neatly smooth, attracted the male eye with a tan and white herringbone suit, complete with purple sweater and pearls. Purple seems to be the color this season (I'm afraid to say "this winter" because the weather would change to spring and I fear that if I said "this spring" we would have another snowfall). A brown and white hounds tooth checked top coat, looking good on Laura Herschler, Kappa; Ruth Bradford, KD, coming into the grill in what I would call the classic best of all, the skirt of brown, white and green plaid, worn with a short-sleeved, five-button, lapel-less green jacket.

All you fashion-minded people who saw "Arsenic and Old Lace," will no doubt remember the evening gown worn by Wanda Austin in the second act. It's not a new style, since it has been done for some time, but the part that never gets old, the beauty of the thing, is important. Tall girls, this is your type of dress. The bodice is simple, with a cape or three-quarter length sleeves, whichever you prefer. The skirt has a low waistline, which we lanky ones wear well, and the fullness in the skirt looks swifty and smart and is definitely becoming.

If you happen to be one of these short people, then please don't take a chance on a dress of this type, because it definitely will not suit. I'll be seeing you!

Tell Him Nail Polish Color By Mail; Not By Bandage

By BETTY BOHANNON

"If you wear nail polish, it must be a dark shade" may sound like an unusual rule to most persons, but it's easily understood by anyone who has made surgical dressings. Chips of light polish do not show up and could slip into one of the neat squares of gauze without being noticed. And while a soldier would like to get a girl's letter enclosed in a sweater, he probably wouldn't appreciate her fingernail polish in his bandage.

This is just one of the rules by which volunteer workers are willing to abide when they give their time and services to help the war effort. Too few U. K. girls are working every Tuesday night at the Red Cross headquarters in the Y.W.C.A. building with Lexington women and under the supervision of instructors who serve not only at the night meeting but during the day every Monday through Friday.

Most of the workers wear white dresses and white veils, although a few have on print dresses or blue caps in place of the veils. Regardless of the color of the dress, it must not be worn to the "Y" but must be brought along and put on after arrival.

Other sanitary precautions include washing hands before entering the working rooms, completely covering the hair with the veil, removing all rings except wedding rings and all bracelets except watches.

The instructors, who wear blue veils, have been chosen on the basis of their ability and neatness, and are very patient in teaching beginners how to fold the dressings, and to avoid "ears" at the corners of the bandages. ("Ears" result when the edges are not folded evenly, and might cause irritation in a wound.)

After the directions have been given and a few dressings have been completed, the task becomes easier until in a short time one can turn them out quickly. The bandages must be the exact size required or they will not pack correctly for shipment to Red Cross headquarters.

Talking is not prohibited, and although a moderate amount of quiet is requested, this is a convenient time and way to have a bull session while doing something useful.

Workers are badly needed since the August through January quota is less than one-sixth completed. Mrs. T. O. Campbell, Chairman of the Day on Mondays, said that if more U. K. girls turn out for the night class an additional class on Monday evening will be started to accommodate them.

'Bama Beats Kentucky 41-32 After Four SEC Victories

Brewer Leads Wildcat Scoring With 11 Points

After piling up a record of four successive Southeastern Conference victories, Kentucky's 'Cats were defeated 41-32 by Alabama's Crimson Tide Saturday night in Tuscaloosa. The Tide team, which refused to be taken aback by the Wildcats' undefeated SEC record, took the lead early in the game and stayed in front.

Mel Brewer, 'Cat center, led the Kentucky team with 11 points, five on free throws. Bert Avery, veteran 'Bama guard, was the outstanding offensive player of the game with 14 points on six field goals and two charity heaves.

For the victorious Crimson team it was perfect teamwork and clever guarding, similar and superior to that which enabled them to defeat Georgia Tech last week, that gained for them the triumph.

Eleven minutes after the beginning of the first half, the Wildcats drew up to a 9-8 score, the closest they came during the game. Avery, Charley Smith, and J. F. Sharp scored for the Tide from that point on while the Big Blue was gathering but four field goals before the half ended with Alabama leading 20-16.

Coach Paul Burnum's quintet started the second half with its original lineup and moved out 10 points after five minutes of play. That margin proved too much for the Kentucky boys, although they sliced the lead to seven with five minutes to go.

Jim Homer, Tide center, scored on a shot under the basket to run the count to 40-31. Shortly afterwards, he fouled out but Coach Adolph Rupp's team added only a foul shot while Red Bell, Tide guard, ended the game with a successful free throw.

Brewer, high scorer for the 'Cats; Marvin Akers, who scored six points on long shots in the second half, and Milt Ticeo, who kept the Wildcats in the game during the first period, were standout players for the Blue and White.

Bell, Alabama freshman, and Avery played good defensive games while Erwin and Homer took re-

Close guarding on both sides led to many fouls with Kentucky losing Ticeo and Alabama losing Homer late in the game.

The 'Cats begin a four game series in Lexington when they meet the Tide in Alumni gym. Saturday night, February 6.

Close Games Mark Last Weeks Contests

By HAYNE PRIDE

The Intramural fraternity and independent quintets enter their third week of competition after only three of nine scheduled games were played Thursday because of wet floors.

The Independent League furnished the action as the Basketers nosed out the Y.M.C.A. 17-11; the Jeeps triumphed over the U. K. Band, 42-21, and the Harrison Eagles zoomed over the B-24s, 16-13.

Last week's contests were marked by several close games, two of which were won by only one point. Three games were won via the forfeit route. The SAE's won on a forfeit from DTD, in League A. Sigma Chi forfeited to PKT in League B, and the Triangles were given one by ATO.

KERNEL SPORTS

The Sporting Way

By BAXTER MELTON

The old "We're Gonna Build a Fieldhouse" song that's been hummed around UK for several years had a rousing verse added last week when University trustees wrote in a somewhat new lyric.

Thursday's meeting turned out to be more than a regular acceptance of these and those recommendations, recognition of new faculty appointees, et al, when the members voted to buy a tract of land between Lexington avenue and Rose street on Euclid avenue, and start erection as soon after the war as possible.

Kentucky's General Assembly started the ball rolling last year by appropriating $400,000. This sum is to cover both the purchase of the four and a half acre site and the building itself. Three other lots are also to be bought in that area; one, a 40x100 plot, another a 35x100, both on Euclid, and the other an apartment building on Washington avenue. Condemnation papers are to be filed immediately against the remaining property on the tracts.

When completed the fieldhouse will accommodate 10,000 spectators at basketball tilts, or two and a half times the capacity of Alumni gym. Plans call for a structure 150 feet long and 200 feet wide.

UK's pool-less swimming team will find their major problem solved, too, since a pool is included in the blueprints. For years the 'Catfish have been going to Richmond to work out in Eastern's pool, or went without practice.

The boom that the fieldhouse will bring to Kentucky athletics is almost unestimable. Undoubtedly, the Kentucky state basketball tourney will be returned to Lexington, because of its more central location and desirability as a sports town. Chances are that the Southeastern Conference meet would be held here, since, with a return to normal transportation, a crowd of 10,000 would be an easy matter. Louisville's Jelerson County Armory, an unanimous choice of loop coaches, can only hold around 6,500.

Indiana, Notre Dame and other big northern schools would probably be met on the home floor, while the boost to Wildcat swimmers is obvious.

Most folks hereabout feel that the southern eliminations of the National Intercollegiate basketball eliminations could justifiably be awarded the University. Last year the meet was held in New Orleans.

Today's Best Quote—Bowser Chest, who has officiated at many Wildcat cage tilts (rumor has it all the losing ones), had been rejected by his draft board because of heart trouble. When asked by another rel where he got the ailment, Chest quipped "While refereeing at Kentucky."

Entry blanks for the SEC tourney to be held in Louisville's Armory February 25, 26 and 27, have been mailed to 12 loop schools. Bernie Shively, athletic director and meet manager, has announced. Shively expects answers from all the institutions, including Florida, which has dropped its intercollegiate schedule, but is expected to take part in the eliminations.

Changes To Come To All --- The Commons Not Excluded

By JOSEPH E. HUTCHINSON

There'll be some changes made—in the Union Commons—but they won't be all at once nor today. When the government rations all foods, then you can expect less of some things to eat and the usual amount of others.

Take meat—like a nice T-bone steak smothered in onions or an oversized pork chop acting as a fence between the peas and mashed potatoes—these cuts of meat are getting scarce and the dietitian has to take whatever she can get.

No meatless days have been planned yet, however, but chickens or fish or some other substitute may take the place of beef and pork on the Commons' menu. You will gradually get used to a drumstick or maybe, if things get worse, no meat at all.

In the good old days, the days before the Nazis drummed into Poland, a student could pick some delectable vegetable, like peas, potatoes, carrots, green beans, or even fresh tomatoes. Now things will be different.

The wholesalers have frozen canned foods. They allow only one case of each kind of food to each customer. That means that there are less of each kind of food for you but more kinds of food from which to choose, for this quarter at least.

Bread? Cakes, doughnuts, pies? Well, the cost of flour is up and there is a dearth of shortening and fats in which to cook them. The price may go up on these things and it will not be unusual to see the cooks in the Commons rendering fats.

Naturally, you want coffee, cream, and sugar. Then you need not worry. The coffee ration was based on the amount the Commons used last year and that includes the private parties and dinners. Since these private parties and dinners are down 25 per cent, the Commons has all the coffee it needs.

There is plenty of sugar, too, but the cream is a problem. Sometimes there is plenty of coffee cream and at other times not very much.

And now, what will you choose for dessert? Some frozen salad, a chocolate pie sprinkled with coconut, a chocolate custard covered with whipped cream, or a salad with marshmallows, or some ice cream? Pardon the laugh! You may have the ice cream, but not as much as before, and chocolate, coconut, and marshmallows and whipped cream are gone for the duration.

That almost makes you wish for peace, doesn't it? Don't take it so hard. There are some bright linings in the gray thunder clouds. The meal times will be the same, there will be more variety in food even if there is less, and the Commons still has one box of cocoa.

Government Asks For Travel Photos

Collegiate globe trotters who have taken photographs, still or motion, in Europe, Asia, or Africa are asked to lend them to the Pictorial Records Division of the Office of Strategic Services for use in mapping war plans.

The types of material wanted are: Aerial views, industrial installations, air fields, highways, docks, harbors, coastlines, beaches, canals, and rivers. Before sending in their pictures, persons in possession of this sort of material should apply for a questionnaire to Col. L. E. Norris, Strategic Photos, Box 46, Station "G," New York City.

WILDCATS DROP TO SECOND PLACE IN SEC STANDING

Alabama's Win Places LSU In Top Position

At press time yesterday Kentucky's Wildcats found themselves "on the outside, looking in" of the Southeastern Conference's first position. Alabama's 41-32 win Saturday night tumbled the 'Cats into second place behind Louisiana State's Bengals.

The Ruppmen had a chance to move into a tie with the Tigers in last night's game with Vanderbilt in Nashville. The Commodores held the Blues to a 39-38 nod here last week, so the going was expected to be anything but easy for the Kentuckians.

The Bengal Conference record stands at five won, one lost, while Kentucky's wins total four against one loss. In third place was Mississippi State with nine successes and three reverses. The Maroons take on one of the loop's big boys, Tennessee, in Knoxville Saturday night.

In addition to last night's start, against Vandy, the 'Cats meet 'Bama here Saturday night. Besides gunning for a return to the top spot, Coach Adolph Rupp's boys will be out for revenge against the 'Capstone eagles. Last year's scheduled tilts between Tucky and 'Bama saw the Tide win in Tuscaloosa and the 'Cats in Lexington, so this year's series may see a duplicate of that record.

Another important brawl sends the league-leading Tigers against Tech in Atlanta Friday night. Tech currently rests in fifth place.

Other games match Mississippi vs. Alabama at Tuscaloosa and Tennessee vs. Xavier at Cincinnati Monday; Georgia Tech vs. Fort Benning's Paratroopers in Atlanta Tuesday; L. S. U. vs. Georgia Pre-Flight at Athens Wednesday; Georgia vs. Auburn at Auburn, and Mississippi vs. Vanderbilt at Nashville, all Friday; L. S. U. vs. Auburn at Auburn, and Tulane vs. Georgia Tech at Atlanta, all Saturday.

Conference standings:

Team	W	L	Pct.
Louisiana State	5	1	.833
Kentucky	4	1	.800
Miss. State	9	3	.750
Tennessee	3	1	.750
Georgia Tech	3	2	.600
Mississippi	4	3	.571
Alabama	6	5	.545
Tulane	3	3	.500
Vanderbilt	4	5	.444
Georgia	0	2	.000
Florida	0	6	.000
Auburn	0	9	.000

Badger Netters Will Be Tough This Year, Their Coach Says

By ART BRONSON

BASKETBALL Coach Harold E. Foster, whose very presence at the University of Wisconsin presents a good case that he knows what he's about, predicts that he'll have a good first team again this year.

Going back further than two years would be shaking skeletons, so we'll just let things go with the reminder that two years ago the Badger cagers were Big Ten champions and last year finished in a three-way tie for second. Which pretty much gives authenticity to whatever Coach Foster says on the subject.

He's got five veterans: John Kotz and Bob Sullivan, forwards; Fred Rehm and Ray Lautenbach, guards; and Walt Patterson, center. Bertillon statistics are not at hand on these worthies, but not all are likely to be first-string class when the season really gets under way.

You know how it is; as soon as some of the more agile sophomores get the awe out of their systems they begin to muscle in to the lineup. It's that way everywhere and Wisconsin isn't likely to be an exception because there are a dozen or so assorted second-year men in there hustling. Among them Guard Paul Bronson, who is not related to your correspondent.

If Wisconsin does churn up the foe as Foster hopes and probably prays, it isn't likely any one will have the cheek to say the schedule was a pushover. Besides 13 Big Ten games—than which competition there is none tougher—the Maroons will face two service teams, Great Lakes and Iowa Air, as well as others in the strapping-big class. Twenty-one games they'll play. Coach Foster, although optimistic about the first-stringers, is a little gloomy over the reserve situation. Graduation took four of his work horses, men who could be counted on to leap to the fray for a few minutes while their betters got their breath, and Foster doesn't think he's got any of that type left of freshmen.

Lieut. Cutter Praises Athletics For Building Up Fighting Spirit

By ART BRONSON

DISTRESSING as it may seem to timid mothers and more-constructed professors, the violent type of athletics, with the utterances of the Navy's Lieut. Slade Cutter, now assume a place of major preflight importance.

The lieutenant knows whereof he speaks, for he kicked a field goal for the Midgies in 1934 that beat Army 3 to 0, a particular job the Amphibious task force had been unable to do in the previous 13 years. We offer that as Lieutenant Cutter's qualification from the athletics angle. From the war-winning angle it is enough to point out that lately he sighted Jap ships and sank same from a sub in the South Pacific. Now he's at the submarine base at New London, Conn., teaching how to fish it out.

Says he, "Sport makes you offensive-minded. War is like a game. When you get a sock on the jaw you've got to think fast to avoid getting hit again." He believes athletics stimulate the faculty of hitting more and getting hit less.

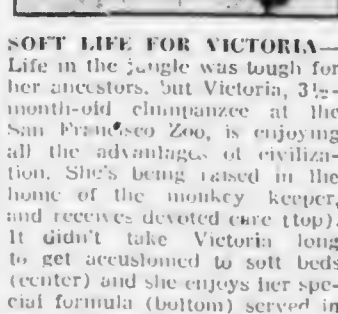

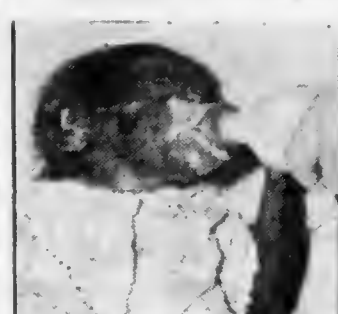

LIEUTENANT CUTTER'S sock-on-the-jaw philosophy has been around a while, during the past year you almost think he's second guessing. Cutterism has been an accepted war technique.

It's no good fretting about it because the Navy—not just Cutter himself but all of it—is a believer and some of the recruits are even being taught how to handle a Jap in the good old-fashioned Jap manner, namely, by jujitsu, or judo, as it's known among the Nips (to use a derogatory term). If you happen to see him in a Jap's back home rocking a little on his new sea legs, ready to grab the town bully by one ankle and one wrist and throw him around the lot, don't be surprised. Cut is a guerilla expert.

SOFT LIFE FOR VICTORIA

Life in the jungle was tough for her ancestors, but Victoria, 3 1/2-month-old chimpanzee at the San Francisco Zoo, is enjoying all the advantages of civilization. She's being raised in the home of the monkey keeper, and receives devoted care (top). It didn't take Victoria long to get accustomed to soft beds (center) and she enjoys her special formula (bottom) served in a nursing bottle.
